Dear Dr. Alamsyah,
Universitas Islam Negeri Raden Intan Lampung, Indonesia

Thank you for your submission to International Journal of Innovation, Creativity and Change. The topic is of considerable potential interest to our readers.

In preparation for the peer review process, we have carried out a preliminary checking of format and style. Please carefully check the attached pre-edited version of your document. Green or blue highlighting indicates changed items. If you agree with the changes, then only your approval is needed (but please leave the highlighting). Otherwise, please make additional changes and mark those changes with another color of highlighting or with colored text.

Please note: The references and citations have been formatted to International Journal of Innovation, Creativity and Change guidelines; kindly ensure that these changes are maintained. Please do not use EndNote, the citation function in Word software, or any other citation manager during your revisions. Yellow highlighting, if any, indicates items that require author attention. Most often we use yellow highlighting when we are not sure about the intended meaning. In other cases, information needs to be supplied by the authors, or a sentence needs to be inserted to clarify a point being made. Yellow highlighting also is used if something is missing from a literature reference, e.g., the title, issue number, or final page number. Please respond to this e-mail and keep [IJICC__0920201] in the subject line for all e-mail correspondence related to this submitted article.

schools in the rural area of Lampung province, Indonesia which fulfilled the inclusion and exclusion criteria. The anthropometric data of Body Mass Index (BMI/age), was categorised into normal nutrition ($-2\text{ SD} < +1\text{ SD}$), overweight nutrition ($+1\text{ SD} < +2\text{ SD}$) and obesity nutrition status ($Z > +2\text{ SD}$). Anaemic status was acquired by directly measuring the haemoglobin rate in students' blood. STH infection was detected by stool microscopic examination using the floatation method. Academic achievement was gained from the annual average value (even and odd semesters). About 83.6 % of students had normal nutrition status, 15.4% thin and 0.9% fat was found. Students positively infected by STH were up to 48.7%. The prevalence of anaemia was 40.2%. There was no relationship between anaemic status with STH infection and learning achievement, STH infection with nutrition status or nutrition status with anaemic status and learning achievement. Local Tradition as Sunnah in Malik's Perspective and its Relevance to Islamic Law Development in a Pluralistic Society

In Muslim societies some consider local traditions to be contrary to Islam. This understanding is not in accordance with the conditions of a pluralistic modern society because it can incite a radical and intolerant attitude. Therefore, a model of understanding of Islam must be sought that can bring Islam and tradition together peacefully, as suggested by Imam Malik bin Anas. In his work, al-Muwatta', Malik states that the local traditions of the people of Medina are part of Sunnah. Thus they can be made law if there are no other sources of law, such as hadith. In some cases, these local traditions can be stronger and must take precedence over traditions conveyed by individual sources. Malik's understanding has succeeded in aligning Islamic law and community traditions in jointly realising benefits. Malik's view is relevant in the effort to formulate Islamic law as dynamic, elastic and substantive, in accordance with the development of a pluralistic society. Pages 685 to 699

An Analysis of Literary Works and Cultural Contents in Foreign Language Textbooks (Russian, French, and English)

Wati Istanti^a, Anastasia Pudjiherwanti^b, Maria Beloborodova^c, ^{a,b}Universitas Negeri Semarang, Indonesia, ^cSaint Peterburg State University, Rusia,

Foreigners need a language book to make it easier for them to learn a second or foreign language and in order to improve their language skills. Literature is considered a hard language study to date, even for native speakers and so there are only a few foreign language books containing literary works. Literary works and cultural contents should have been analysed to prove that literature can serve as a language instructional medium for foreigners. This study relied on the content analysis method to describe the literary works and cultural contents in language books for foreigners; e.g. an intermediate-level Russian book (ASSIMIL Russian B2), a French book (Version Originale 3 Methode De Francais Livre De L'eleve B1), and an English book (Essential English for Foreign Students Book 2). Literary works and culture can be utilised in the language
